

Geneva, August 8th 2019

Dear Scientists of the IPCC,

As members of a large transnational network of young climate activists, we have come here to Geneva to express our gratitude.

We are thankful for the decades of continuous dedication that you have committed to reveal the damage that we human kind have done to the planet Earth. You lay the foundation for what we are protesting for. We unite behind the Science that you are conducting and encourage governments to now act on your conclusions.

Our understanding is that the latest report makes clear that industrial farming and wider land use is a major driver of climate change and must be tackled alongside fossil fuel use if Paris climate commitments are to be met.

Unless greenhouse gas emissions are cut rapidly we may face food insecurity in many parts of the world

We are the generation that is affected by climate crisis and by lack of action. We will continue to use our voice to help amplify yours.

Your work and your conclusions are the basis and reason for us to rise up.

Yours sincerely,
